SPRING / SUMMER 2019

“I see beauty in the objects around me”

One day I was lying on the beach, I looked around and saw five women wearing the same swimsuit. Five different women! I began looking around at all the women on the beach, and they were all wearing variations of the same few suits. That very day I went home and started to design. I see beauty in the objects around me; stones, fabrics, gems, material, art, things that you would never associate with swimwear and then I create the unexpected. I think of myself as a collaborator, combining swimwear with the beauty in the world. I don't want to look like every other woman on the beach, and neither do the people I design for.

My initial inspiration was jasper stone, the vibrant colors and the way the material both contradicted and complimented the softness of the swimwear. These paintings made me feel the same way. Kasia Roginska

The Artist & Photographer

Mathieu Jean

Mathieu Jean by Karo Swimwear

Mathieu Jean is a compulsive artist with a rapidly growing circle of notable collectors; among them are Ringo Starr, Matt Sorum (Guns n' Roses, The Cult, Velvet Revolver, Kings of Chaos), and more. Much of the inspiration for the work is derived from a lifetime of artistic experimentation and travels across Africa, Asia, and a constellation of special places. He identifies himself more closely with tribal mystics, aboriginal peoples, and shaman than any singular art movement.

I love exploring what's beneath the surface, looking for what's possible. The waters of Indonisa, Zanzibar, and the Caribbean hold a powerful influence on my artwork. They are so substantial, vibrant and primal. Beneath the ocean is a whole world ablaze with adventure and freedom and complete relaxation. In my travels diving off these coasts, exploring the coral reefs, I become a conduit and the paintings just pour out of me.
